Who knows of another company that loves clocks so much for so long?

Dutch company NeXtime celebrates 40 years of excellence as a leading international company designing and manufacturing clocks.

Dutch company NeXtime celebrates 40 years of excellence as a leading international company designing and manufacturing clocks. Formed in 1970 as “Alma Clocks”, the business started with the “Zaanse clock”; one of the most popular Dutch clocks and incrementally added other clock types to the range.

It successfully moved the business away from the traditional clocks industry into the modern day design company it is today. NeXtime is now a leading clocks company with offices around the globe and selling in more than 60 countries worldwide.

Commenting on the company’s development, Alain Frie said, “I am proud with the progress the business has made from Alma into NeXtime. Our success is derived from our ability to keep up with the times and ahead of the design trends. In 40 years we have presented many bold clock designs that came from our own design team and as a result of working closely with international designers. The design-led clocks of NeXtime are highly successful and some of our designs like the “PlugInn” and the “Beauty” have been selling for more than a decade.

NeXtime will celebrate its 40th anniversary during the international trade shows in Spring and other events during 2010.

Founded in 1970, NeXtime is the worldwide leader in clocks. The company offers a wide range of wall clocks, table clocks and alarm clocks designed for people to enjoy and looking how time passes by more fun.
